ABSTRACT

A2
The invention discloses a body including a filler material for simulating human female breast tissue, a base including a peripheral edge and an upper surface for supporting the filler material, a cover including a peripheral edge and a first surface, and at least one pathological element disposed within the filler material. The peripheral edge of the cover sealingly engages the peripheral edge of the base so that the filler material is contained between the first surface of the cover and the upper surface of the base, which is made of a substantially rigid material.
